INVASION OF MEXICO.

The actual circumstances which surrounded the recovery of the body of Vergara from its Mexican grave is thus surrounded with much uncertainty. Nevertheless feeling runs high along the border and it would not be surprising if as first reported Texas Rangers had figured in the trip, but the later reports denying such par-ticipation fail to give a satisfactory explanation of the affair.

Much depends upon what is learnactual details before the seriousness of it can be determined. That it was accomplished without bloodshed is one redeeming feature, but it comes at a time which is not calculated to contribute anything towards he bettering of the situation along the border.

NEW HAVEN FINANCES.

In view of the New Haven road's condition, the insinuations as to how it has gotten there and the congresdonal demand for a further investigation of its financial affairs because it has been robbed, it is a particularly timely statement which has been issued by J. P. Morgan & Co. at the request of Chairman Efflott. These bankers have long acted as financial agents for the New Haven system and have come in for much criticism in onnection therewith but the revelation that it has handled business amounting to $223,000,000 for which it has received only $350,000 indicates that no exorbitant fees have been charged in a period of twenty years In fact it shows that the road has

Not only is this business statement rendered at an opportune time for removing any false notions which are so casily crowded in where facts are un known, but it is important both to the road and to the bankers. It shows that the house of Morgan had not been engaged in the business of bleeding the road, and likewise that the financial operations of the road with this banking house have been under the most favorable terms to the road. Such carries its own significance. It brings to light facts and information which serve to clear up wrong impressions. The transactions were those in which dishonest dealing hould not be countenanced and the businesslike statement shows that they were not.

SPELLING REFORM.

Many are there who are experimenting in spelling reform and endeavoring to rearrange the alphabet and establish new characters which would eliminate the many peculiarities which exist today. Efforts along various lines are constantly being made, but it is more than evident that perfection has not been attained.

Concerning the various reform movements the Springfield Republican says: "What is really needed is collaboration between a board of phonetic experts and some artists of taste and skill, type designers included. Each letter should meet all tests. either in print or script, and in all tyles of typography, and should harmonize with the existing letters of the dishabet. With such a font printing English phonetically would not be much harder than printing Italian or Spanish phonetically, and then it would be quite soon enough to begin propaganda. If it proved artistic and satisfactory it would quickly appeal to the progressives, and it could employed for scientific sublications without waiting for a penular boom. And if for a long time mild tinkering until the alphabet is made more adequate to its work."

Reformation in spelling has been underway for a long time. Whether t would result in any better spellers is difficult of determination. Because of its many inconsistencies probably nothing is more neglected today than spelling. If the reform will bring results even among those just out of school it can get here none too soon.

CONCESSION TO ULSTER.

Premier Asquith has spoken and

The proposition now is to refer the matter to the parliamentary electors of the countles in Ulster that it may be determined by a majority vote whether the exclusion of sounded matter-of-fact to anybody tary electors of the countles in Ulster of the Irish parliament is desirable. From the declarations which have gone forth from Ulster and the disapproval of home rule which goes with the fight being made against it, it is to be supposed that such a vote would reveal the desire for the exclusion clause, but from the feeling which exists there it remains to be seen whether they would be satisfied to now he was convinced that had be which they fear during a period of six years the wisdom or folly of their present course might be better deter-

SUBSIDIES AND TREATIES.

While much fear is being expressed hat great harm will be done to American shipping through the requirement that American coasting vessels nust pay tolls in going through the Panama canal, the situation is one which simply calls for the meeting of he problem in a different way. It is nquestionably true that all the encouragement possible is needed for he building up of American shipping but it is also important that such legislation should be attempted directly rather than through the exemption of olls. Otherwise it becomes a rider. Vessels engaged in domestic com-merce have the exclusive right to do ousiness between American ports. All oreign vessels are barred from that held so that a protection in the naure of a subsidy already exists,

The inclusion of such features in important bills is usually accompanled by more or less trouble because of conflict with treaty Such has previously been the experience and it is nothing strange that it ng made the venture, it is doubtless appears in this connection. In the recent tariff bill it is maintained that the provision giving a rebate of five Nothing of a harmful nature per cent, on goods brought to this country in American bottoms is a vio-lation of treaty rights. This is one of the things which can best be determined by the pulse of the people. It is a concession which would give Uister a chance to watch and study the operation of the new government. Foss sat very still for two hours. Parker came in once and glanced at him, with the intuition of the perfectly trained servant, saw that he was not wanted and withdrew. ### For Rough, Wrinkled, Freckled, Pimpled Skin

"Good!" answered Foes. "Come on!"
The monotony of stone and sky was beginning to affect Foss and his eyes were fixed on the land immediately in front of him when he was startled by an exclamation from his guide.
"Mother of mine," cried the man. "The woman is dead!"
The Englishman looked up, and immediately his heart seemed to stand still. There, not more than 50 feet away—but far enough to mean the difference between life and death—was the fragile form of a young woman, away—but far enough to mean the difference between life and death—was the fragile form of a young woman, a mere girl, clinging desperately to an arm of stone nature had hewed out of the rock that formed the highest peak of that range of mountains. Evidently she had fallen when turning the corner, and as she rolled down the side caught this "straw."

Foss signalled to her, but it was obvious she could not reply.

"We must save her," cried Foss, undoing the rope from his guide.

"It is madness!" his companion exclaimed. "Monsleur will merely sacrifice two lives instead of one."

"And as it happens, that second one is forfeited already. Come, Henri, I may as well die a so-called hero. You needn't tell them that it was only a two months' life I gave. Let them think I was a hero. It will look better in the papers."

low on the peak, and could glance below at the girl.

He dragged the rope up after him,
Henri releasing it at the other side.
Then he fastened it to the peak and commenced to crawl like a cat down the steep rock. He grasped her roughly by both shoulders.

"Try to climb," he gasped. "I'm secure. You cannot fall."

She clawed at the rock and gradually a hero, yet he cursed himself many times.

"Too late—too late!" he cried, when one. "Oh God, had I met her before -but I never met her!" Eagerly in his room he counted the number of days he had to live. They number of days he had to live. As March winds, flying dust and dirt are apt to injure any complexion, this information will be of special value right now. If you have any cutaneous blemis, don't use paint, powder or anything eise to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimpies, moth patches, sallowness, red or yellow blotches or any surface eruption. The each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. A Physic an's Advice

A Physic an's Advice

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best the accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the itssues and blood and as rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless.
